Good Morning Alarice,

It was my pleasure getting to meet with you and Demontus. I appreciated being given the opportunity to show you our urban farm and our commitment to what I think government and non-government entities can do together if the shared commitment starts to make the planet a better place to live for all of us. I have two links that will take you to what we have been doing. Obviously if there is anything I can do to help expand our work within the various City departments that may see this as an avenue of improvement, please consider me an ally in those efforts.

Also Demontus caught the smell coming from the United Rentals human waste management tanks and processes which has been placed directly opposite our shared property line. The stench she smelled at 10:00 am was actually much less offensive when during other parts of the day when it's hotter and more of their waste retrieval trucks are dumping the daily collected sewage into their onsite tanks it can be truly overwhelming. Would you mind at least looking into this and see if where they have located this part of their operation is compliant with any ordinances that regulate these activities? I like to be a good neighbor but I don't know why this activity is permitted right on the property line and in fact, there have been more than a few people who have toured our farm who have commented on the odious odors emanating from that process. Perhaps a better setback from the property line would have been more inline with this type of operation. I'd appreciate any insight you may be able to provide on the matter.

Have a great day and keep up the great work!
